

National Journal

The Atlantic

A NEW AMERICA

HOW MILLENNIALS ARE SPARKING CHANGE

Friday, December 6, 2013

2:00 - 4:00 pm Program

4:00 - 4:30 pm Networking Reception & Refreshments

California State University
University Student Union Theater
5151 State University Drive
Los Angeles, CA

Evidence is growing that Millennials may represent the tipping point generation in American life, whose preferences and priorities are setting the direction for public and private life over the decades ahead. They are, by far, the most diverse generation in American history, with non-whites comprising about 40 percent. Millennials are on track to be the most educated generation, the most connected and the most wired, with a bent for entrepreneurship and service.

Join National Journal and The Atlantic for the first in a series of town hall events that will examine the opportunities, inclinations and impact of this giant generation with insights from millennials, government officials, educators, entrepreneurs, and more.

WITH SPECIAL THANKS TO OUR UNDERWRITER:

RSVP: MillennialPathways.eventbrite.com

MODERATOR:

Ronald Brownstein
Editorial Director,
Atlantic Media

FEATURING:

William A. Covino, Ph.D.
President, California State University, Los Angeles

The Honorable Xavier Becerra (D-CA)
Member, U.S. House of Representatives

Emily Allen, Ph.D.
Professor & Dean, College of Engineering,
Computer Science and Technology,
California State University, Los Angeles

Rob Carpenter
Professor, Innovation & Technology, California
State University, Los Angeles & Executive Director,
Global Center for Innovation and Entrepreneurship

Shahin Kohan
President, AIMS 360

Estelle Reyes
Executive Director, Network for Teaching
Entrepreneurship

Connect with us

  #MillennialPathways

Note to Government Employees: We welcome your attendance at the event, however we kindly ask that you confirm in advance with your Departmental Ethics Office that you are permitted to attend.